

Contents

Foreword by Bill White.....	V
1 Introduction	1
2 Challenges for governance at central banks	9
2.1 Introduction.....	9
2.2 A broad perspective on central bank governance	10
2.3 External governance: challenges of political environment for central banks.....	11
2.3.1 The agency model applied to central banking	12
2.3.2 Good legal underpinning	14
2.4 Challenges of internal governance at central banks.....	16
2.5 Application of private-sector governance arrangements to central banks.....	18
2.5.1 The Code of Good Practices on Transparency in Monetary and Fiscal Policies.....	18
2.5.2 The OECD principles	19
2.5.3 Basel Committee on Banking Supervision guidance.....	20
2.5.4 Management of conflicts of interest and codes of ethics.....	21
2.6 Work at the BIS on the governance of central banks.....	23
2.7 Conclusion	24
Annex 1	26
Annex 2	27
Selected bibliography	28
3 Insolvency laws – a review of the international dimension.....	31
3.1 Introduction.....	31
3.2 The key issues identified.....	33
3.3 What international and domestic efforts are currently under way?.....	36
3.3.1 G30 study.....	36
3.3.2 UNCITRAL	37

3.3.3	EU	38
3.3.4	World Bank/IMF	38
3.3.5	OECD	39
3.3.6	G10	39
3.3.7	Basel Committee on Banking Supervision	40
3.3.8	Domestic bankruptcy laws.....	42
3.4	Serious issues identified.....	42
3.4.1	Universality vs. territoriality – theory and practice.....	42
3.4.2	Can we reduce the legal risks relating to the enforceability of netting and collateral agreements?.....	45
3.4.3	Insolvency law in a major financial crisis	47
3.4.4	Potential starting points	49
3.4.5	The role of rating agencies	52
3.5	Conclusion	53
	References	55
4	Collective action clauses: the way forward	57
4.1	Background	58
4.2	The adoption of CACs in sovereign bond issues in 2003–2004	64
4.3	Continued international support for the inclusion of CACs in 2003–2004	66
4.4	Selected key issues in the introduction of CACs	67
4.4.1	The choice to adopt CACs.....	67
4.4.2	Differences in CACs across various national legislations	68
4.4.3	Cause for concern	75
4.4.4	Issues yet to be tackled	75
4.4.5	Majority action clauses of CACs.....	76
4.5	Summary and some key open issues	77
	Appendix A	79
	Appendix B	83
5	Note on the consequences of a potential default by Argentina to the IMF	85
5.1	Introduction.....	85
5.2	Impact on IMF accounts	85
5.2.1	Principal.....	85
5.2.2	Interest payment	86

5.3	Liquidity impact on the IMF.....	86
5.3.1	Short term.....	86
5.3.2	Longer-term financial flexibility and planning.....	87
5.3.3	Longer-term prospects.....	87
6	Debt resolution processes for sovereign debt – current policy issues.....	89
6.1	Introduction.....	89
6.1.1	The recent political and institutional backdrop to the Sovereign Debt Resolution Mechanisms (SDRM) discussion.....	89
6.2	The nature of the underlying problem and a possible solution.....	90
6.3	Broad agreement on underlying motivation.....	92
6.4	Inside CACs: economic, legal and political issues.....	95
6.4.1	Economic issues.....	96
6.4.2	Legal issues.....	98
6.4.3	Political and other issues.....	99
6.5	SDRM – taking stock.....	100
6.6	Summary.....	102
	Annex: Pricing of bonds.....	103
	References.....	105
	Newspapers.....	106
7	The successor states of the former Yugoslavia – mediation under Art. 7, Annex C of the Vienna Agreement on Succession Issues – a major review.....	107
7.1	Some background.....	107
7.2	The issue at hand.....	108
7.3	The content of this note.....	108
7.4	The setting.....	109
7.4.1	Hard-currency savings in the former SFRY.....	109
7.4.2	The question of timing.....	110
7.4.3	The question of size.....	112
7.4.4	The commercial banks.....	114
7.4.5	The commercial banks and the NBY.....	117
7.4.6	The nature of the depositors in the former SFRY.....	122
7.4.7	Freezing of accounts and the foreign exchange market.....	122
7.4.8	Hard-currency savings defined.....	125
7.4.9	Events after succession.....	125

7.5	Is there a solution (solutions) in sight?	126
7.5.1	Final beneficiary	127
7.5.2	The nature of the guarantee – the inheritance principle	129
7.5.3	Equitable division of foreign assets and liabilities as principle	131
7.5.4	Equity as principle for the apportionment of assets and liabilities	132
7.5.5	International law and domestic law	134
7.5.6	The attitudes of the parties involved.....	135
7.6	Summary of open questions, concerns and first impressions	135
Annex 1	140
Annex 2: The Basel process and procedural aspects.....		141
Annex 3	147
Appendix 1	150
Selected references	153
8	International bank and securities financing in Africa	155
9	The aftermath of the Russian debt crisis.....	159
9.1	Introduction.....	159
9.2	Economic developments since the crisis.....	160
9.3	The external debt of Russia.....	162
9.4	Russia's relations with its creditors	166
9.4.1	Russia and the IMF.....	166
9.4.2	Russia and the Paris Club	168
9.4.3	Russia and London Club.....	170
9.5	The debt situation in regions and cities.....	171
9.6	Russia as creditor nation	171
9.7	Payment on domestic debt	173
9.8	Selected issues	174
9.8.1	Banks and other institutional investors.....	174
9.8.2	Bailing-in calls and the role of the private sector	176
9.8.3	The role of credit rating agencies in the Russian crisis	178
9.8.4	Lessons from the Mexican and Polish debt scenarios.....	181
9.9	Lessons from the Russian crisis	183
Appendices	185
References	189

10	Banking sector reform in the transition economies – a central banking perspective.....	191
10.1	The relevance of the topic.....	191
10.2	Some major caveats	193
	10.2.1 Interdependence, comprehensiveness and complexity	193
	10.2.2 Eastern Europe – a diverse group of countries ..	194
	10.2.3 Sound banking – a vision emerging.....	194
10.3	Growth and finance – the important link	195
	10.3.1 Introduction	195
	10.3.2 Selected factors in stimulating growth	196
10.4	Banking supervision – status and core principles – a must in avoiding crashes	211
10.5	The supportive role of foreign banks	212
10.6	Non-bank financial intermediaries and conglomerates – high on the watch list	213
10.7	Conclusion	214
	Annex: Illustrative list of indicators of robust financial systems.....	216
	References	217
11	The monetary policy transmission mechanism in Russia	221
11.1	Introduction.....	221
11.2	The CBR – moving forward	221
11.3	The money channel – strengths and weaknesses	223
11.4	The credit channel – a challenge.....	226
11.5	The interest rate channel – beginning to emerge	228
11.6	The foreign component – a cautious opening	231
11.7	Conclusion	232
	Appendix A: Money growth and inflation – how close is the link in Russia?	233
	References	242
12	Exchange rates and monetary policy in central Europe – a survey of some issues.....	243
12.1	Introduction.....	243
12.2	Exchange rate regimes	244
	12.2.1 Institutional backdrop.....	244
	12.2.2 Current exchange rate regime.....	247
	12.2.3 Individual country experience	249
	12.2.4 The size of the forex market	258
	12.2.5 Summary.....	261

12.3	Selected issues in current exchange rate regimes	262
12.4	Exchange rate policy and confidence – a contradiction in terms?.....	265
	12.4.1 Credibility and exchange rate policy	265
	12.4.2 Building credibility.....	268
12.5	Exchange rates and prices.....	271
12.6	Monetary policy in the real world.....	283
	12.6.1 Money supply and exchange rates.....	283
	12.6.2 Interest rates and financial fragility	284
	12.6.3 Capital flows.....	290
	12.6.4 Intervention.....	292
12.7	Conclusion	295
	References	298
13	Financial intermediation: efficiency, fragility and polices for reform.....	301
13.1	Financial intermediation	301
13.2	Financial fragility.....	309
13.3	Banking crises.....	313
13.4	Strengthening financial intermediation.....	315
13.5	Concluding remarks	318
	Bibliography.....	318
14	The monetary policy transmission mechanism in China.....	321
14.1	The changing financial sector	321
14.2	The credit policy perspective	322
14.3	Difficulties in recovering loans.....	324
14.4	Moving away from planning and towards a free market	325
14.5	No signs of overheating in the current cycle.....	326
14.6	The exchange rate policy perspective	326
15	Capital flows in eastern Europe: some lessons from the emerging markets in Latin America and Asia	329
15.1	Introduction.....	329
	15.1.1 The integration of world financial markets	329
15.2	Capital inflows to central Europe	330
15.3	Stylised macroeconomic features influencing capital flow experiences in Latin America, Asia and central Europe	333
15.4	Composition of capital flows	338

15.5	Some key policy issues	343
15.5.1	Inflows and monetary policy: a case study of the Czech Republic	343
15.5.2	Saving, investment and deficits	347
15.5.3	Direct investment: export-oriented?	349
15.6	Conclusion	351
	References	353
Annex	355
A1	The Bank for International Settlements (BIS)	355
A2	The Group of Ten (G10).....	356
Author	357